Deputy City Manager Accepts New Position

Harrisonburg, Va. – The City Manager’s office announces an upcoming change in leadership.

Anne Lewis, deputy city manager, has accepted a position with a private consulting firm. Her last day with the city of Harrisonburg will be May 13.

“During her tenure in Harrisonburg, Anne has provided great leadership and support to all of our departments and staff, including direct, daily oversight of a number of those departments,” said Kurt Hodgen, city manager. “Her abilities and skill set will be very challenging to replace. I can’t thank her enough for her service to the city and wish her well in her new endeavor.”

In September 2010, Ms. Lewis came to Harrisonburg from the city of Winchester, where she spent ten years of her career.

While in Harrisonburg she served as the direct supervisor of Information Technology, Community Development, Human Resources, Parks and Recreation, Public Transportation and Public Information. She also assisted the city manager with the direction, control, and evaluation of overall city operations and in preparing the annual operating budget.

Ms. Lewis is a member of both the International City Managers Association (ICMA) and the Virginia Local Government Management Association (VLGMA).

In the coming weeks, the Human Resources Department will advertise and begin accepting applications for this position. Interested candidates may visit the city’s website to apply or for additional information.
