City Expands its Social Media Presence

Harrisonburg, Va. – The city of Harrisonburg continues expanding its presence on social media.

In a continuous effort to increase communication and to educate the public, the city is launching a new Facebook page to highlight the efforts in its stormwater maintenance and management.

The page, Harrisonburg Stormwater highlights the community wide efforts to provide water quality protection of the streams and rivers. Activities, upcoming events, opportunities to improve water quality, facts about stormwater in general, and information on the city's stormwater improvement plan and credit program is the type of information that will be posted.

"We want to provide another resource to the community on what stormwater-related initiatives are taking place," explained Kelley Junco, environmental compliance manager with the Public Works Department. "This will also serve as an opportunity to remind the public on what they can do to partner with us in keeping the local waterways clean."

Additional information on the city's stormwater program is always available online at www.HarrisonburgVA.gov/stormwater-management-program.

For the latest news and information, members of the public are reminded to stay connected to the city through social media. To connect to the city's social media channels, visit www.HarrisonburgVA.gov/stay-connected.
